

Legal Analytics® for Real Property Litigation

Lex Machina's award-winning Legal Analytics® platform allows outside counsel and in-house attorneys to research and anticipate the behavior of courts, judges, lawyers, law firms, and parties. Over three quarters of Am Law 100 firms and some of the largest global corporations use Legal Analytics to supplement traditional legal research with previously unavailable strategic insights that give them a winning edge. Now, Legal Analytics is available for litigation involving real property in federal courts.

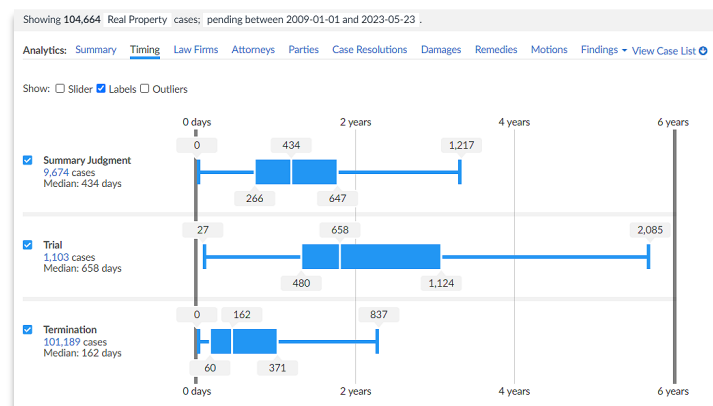

Real property litigation includes any case involving a dispute concerning real property. Note that this Case Type does not include claims pertaining to chattels and personal property, statutory claims, or claims involving purchase agreements not involving mortgages.

This is a complex and expansive area of law that includes diverse wide-ranging legal claims. It is an important area of law in which transparency and understanding are crucial. Lex Machina’s data lets you analyze and derive critical insights on judges, courts, law firms, attorneys, and parties involved in real property.

The Winning Edge

Lex Machina’s Legal Analytics for real property provides valuable data-driven insights and trends in case timing, resolutions, damages, and findings. We help you answer questions such as:

- Over the last three years, which land condemnation cases had the highest amount of real property “just compensation” damages awarded? What were the specific amounts and what happened in those cases?
- Which districts had the highest number of real property cases filed that involved torts to land claims?
- How often do claim defendants prevail on judgment on the pleadings in real property cases involving rent/lease/ejectment claims in the Central District of California?
- Which law firms have the most experience representing defendants in real property cases involving foreclosures before Judge Virginia Phillips?
- What is the median time to termination for real property cases involving land condemnation presided over by Judge Brian Martinotti?
- Who are the most active plaintiffs in the Southern District of New York?
